

ABSTRACT

A method for downloading data from a server to a computer, which includes accessing user preferences; transmitting user preference and computer configuration information to the server; determining applications that can be supported by the computer 5 configuration; and downloading only supported applications to the computer.